fe'male (fē'māl), n. [fr. F., fr. L. femella, dim. of femina woman.] 1. A female human being ; also, a female animal. 2. Bot. A pistillate plant.

Syn. FEMALE, WOMAN, LADY. FEMALE (the correlative of male) emphasizes the idea of sex ; it applies alike to human beings, animals, and plants. Its use as a synonym for woman, once frequent among good writers, is now commonly tabooed. As compared with WOMAN (the correlative of man), which emphasizes essential qualities, LADY (the correlative of gentleman) connotes rather the externals of social position or refinement. Lady is often used as a mere courteous synonym for woman (as, Please allow these ladies to pass) ; but its indiscriminate substitution for woman is vulgar.

— a. 1. Of or pertaining to, or of the sex of, a woman, or an animal of corresponding sex. 2. Characteristic of woman ; feminine. 3. Effeminate. Obs. 4. Bot. a Pertaining to any reproductive organ or portion of a plant body in which large gametes requiring fertilization by smaller gametes are organized. b Pertaining to any plant organ or reproductive body which produces, or is concerned in the production of, fruit after fecundation. Syn. FEMALE, FEMININE, WOMANLY, WOMANLIKE, WOMANISH, EFFEMINATE, LADYLIKE. FEMALE (opposed to male) applies to animals and plants as well as to human beings, and always suggests sex ; FEMININE (opposed to masculine) denotes that which belongs to, or is characteristic of, women, and often suggests gender rather than sex ; it has now practically displaced all except the more strictly physiological senses of female ; as, the female bee ; the female ivy ; a female slave ; feminine, maternal hands ; feminine virtues. WOMANLY (often opposed to girlish) suggests esp. a woman's deeper, tenderer, more gracious qualities ; as, a womanly grace. WOMANLIKE is more apt to suggest characteristically feminine faults or foibles ; as, womanlike, she acted on impulse. WOMANISH (compare mannish, childish) is a term of contempt ; as, your tears are womanish. EFFEMINATE emphasizes unmanly delicacy, luxuriousness, or enervation ; as, an effeminate foppery. LADYLIKE is often used sarcastically to imply a dainty and finical affectation of the proprieties ; as, fops of ladylike mien.
